'Queer Eye' in Atlanta: What You Need to Know After the critical success of Netflix's Queer Eye, we're left wondering: Why Atlanta? In an attempt to live vicariously through the five men of the Fab 5, I chose to watch Queer Eye in Atlanta. And while I'm not ashamed to admit that the Georgia city was one of the spots that came to mind when they were talking about filming locations, I didn't realize the significance of the decision to film in Atlanta. Atlanta is one of the cities that's most rapidly growing in the Southeast. While the city of Atlanta proper has been growing at a rate of almost 9 percent per year since 2012, when the population reached 479,892, Metro Atlanta, which includes Fulton and DeKalb counties, has seen a population increase of almost 10 percent per year since then, bringing the total to 705,000. "The opportunity to be a part of a moment like that is so unprecedented," reveals the show's creator, Carson Kressley, speaking of Atlanta's transformation. "When we filmed here in 1996, I think what we were seeing was the city really had a shot at becoming a major city." Now, as the city stands on the brink of another milestone, it will play host to the first-ever "Queer Eye" episode. Airing on the fourth season of the series on Netflix on Wednesday, Feb. 13, "Queer Eye" will highlight the city's colorful, artistic history, strong community support, and exciting potential for the future. "When we got to Atlanta, we were feeling really, really good about where we were and how things were going for us," explains show creator Carson Kressley. "But when we got there, we felt really excited about the idea of Atlanta being the next step. We knew it was going to be our last stop. And as the show progressed, we wanted to say 'Thanks to Atlanta
